

We were delighted to have 86 people participate in this year's Life Chain. According to organizers of the international event, Campaign Life Coalition (CLC), participation increased significantly this year. Youth Coordinator for CLC, Josie Luetke said in a press release, "Political change also requires cultural and spiritual change." Luetke called Life Chain, "a reminder to all of Canada that no matter who's in government, no matter what other problems we face, COVID-19 included, while the killing of the innocent continues, there is a movement that will stand against it."

WHO IS PULLING THE ABORTION STRINGS?

During the recent federal election, the Trudeau government made the false claim that: "anti-choice organizations are actively working to spread misinformation about abortion, putting the health and safety of young people and vulnerable women at risk."

The Liberal Party platform promised:

Provide up to $10 million to Health Canada to develop an easily accessible portal that provides accurate, judgement-free, and evidence-based information on sexual and reproductive health and rights, which will include a section that counters misinformation about abortion.

No longer provide charity status to anti-abortion organizations (for example, Crisis Pregnancy Centres) that provide dishonest counseling to women about their rights and about the options available to them at all stages of the pregnancy." (emphasis added)

These promises sounded like something taken out of the playbook of the pro-abortion lobby group, Abortion Rights Coalition of Canada (ARCC). The fact is, ARCC has been attacking educational pro-life groups, political pro-life groups, university campus pro-life groups, post-abortion healing groups, and crisis pregnancy centres (CPC's) with these same false allegations for decades.

In 2009, ARCC published a "report" Exposing Crisis Pregnancy Centres in British Columbia which made the following recommendations to the government:

Stop deceptive advertising and false representations of CPCs in the media.

Remove CPCs from referral lists used by the medical profession or social services.

Ensure that the medical profession and social services have accurate information so they can refer women for abortion appropriately.

Create more pro-choice counselling in communities, both options and post-abortion.

Lobby governments and public foundations to stop funding CPCs.

Ask Canada Revenue Agency to revoke the charity status of CPCs.

In 2016, they undertook the task of examining all of the websites of crisis pregnancy centres in Canada, in an attempt to once again discredit their work. Then in 2019, in conjunction with other pro-abortion groups, they successfully lobbied the government to ban all pro-life groups from receiving the Canada Summer Jobs Program. More recently, two "unnamed" pro-abortion organizations filed a complaint with Health Canada about the pro-life website: abortionpillreversal.ca which targets women who may regret taking the abortion pill and wish to seek treatment to reverse their abortion. They claimed women are being "misinformed" about this life-saving treatment, which has saved 2,500 babies to-date. Health Canada dismissed the complaints, but that didn't stop ARCC from asking Health Minister, Patty Hajdu to post a public disclaimer on Health Canada's website.

It is painfully obvious who is pulling the strings of the government. It would be easy for us to become despondent, knowing that the government is doing the bidding of pro-abortion groups, and while we are concerned that Trudeau's election promises pose a direct threat to our work, we also recognize that the desperate strategies of these pro-abortion groups point to the fact that they are losing ground.

With or without a charitable status, we will continue to educate the public and provide accurate information on pregnancy, abortion, and alternatives to abortion. Please know that your donations support life. ■
